Mayor Jules Pipe greets Hackney torchbearers Tim Rushby-Smith, Sharon Jones-Barnes, Aneurin Wood and Kayum Choudhury at Hackney Town Hall square on 29 August

THE 14th Paralympics have been hailed the most 'successful ever' – with Hackney and East London set to benefit from the 2012 Games legacy.

The 12-day sporting extravaganza began on 29 August, when the Paralympic flame was met by cheering crowds in Hackney as it travelled to the Olympic Stadium to light the cauldron for the opening ceremony. The spectacular show, which was seen by 11 million TV viewers, was co-directed by Jenny Sealey MBE, from Hoxton's Graeae Theatre, and included Hackney schoolchildren and residents. With over 2.7 million tickets sold, and GB's highest ever medal count, the success of the Paralympic Games has been unprecedented. Post Games, thousands of new homes and jobs are set to be created in the East End. See pages 2-7 for more info.

Hackney House played host to a post-Games legacy conference for East London

Game on Hackney

LEADING figures responsible for the future of the Olympic Park gathered at Hackney House on 5 September to highlight the benefits the Games will bring to Hackney and East London. Discussions covered the future of affordable homes, creating thousands of jobs, a new park, and sporting and leisure facilities for community use.

Keynote speakers included the Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe; heads of the London Legacy Development Corporation (LLDC) – responsible for the Olympic Park after the Games; and iCity, the organisation set to transform the media centres in Hackney Wick.

Mayor Pipe said: "The media centres have always been the cornerstone of Hackney's ambitions after the Games and we've had a clear vision of how these could be developed to create sustainable jobs.

"Our biggest challenge will be to make sure regeneration brings about a positive change to the lives of people living in Hackney and East London."

In his first outing as interim chief executive of LLDC, Dennis Hone, said: "The Games are a catalyst for change, not the solution. We need to grasp the future now, and we need to work together – local authorities, education providers, businesses and communities.

"We need to make sure that developments in the park bleed across the boundaries; and that fences around the Olympic Park come down to make it accessible to local communities."

Richard Gibbs, iCity's business director, added: "Hackney has the highest concentration of creative digital businesses anywhere in Europe and was key to my company registering an interest two years ago. Our aim is to bring together a data centre and an enterprise that can create thousands of jobs."

iCity's plans include a commitment from Loughborough University to open a postgraduate research centre in Hackney Wick, focusing on sport, exercise and health; media and communications; and business management.

John Walker, from the university, said: "Our aspiration is to develop research and enterprise at graduate level, working with local educational and business partners."

There was also a panel discussion with architects, charities and other organisations which have helped realise legacy projects connected with the Games.

“ We need to make sure that developments in the park bleed across the boundaries ”

News in brief

Disability festival announced

AN annual festival of disability sport is to be created at the Olympic Park along with new sporting, leisure and employment opportunities.

London Legacy Development Corporation (LLDC), which is responsible for the long term planning and management of the park after the Games, has pledged £2million to create an event linked to training at sports clubs across surrounding boroughs.

The cash will also be used to introduce sports including wheelchair rugby and basketball, boccia and goalball to the Copperbox in Hackney; recruit Paralympians and other disabled people as community ambassadors; and help disabled people get jobs in the park.

The programme will also create new public spaces, homes and sporting venues that are accessible to all. Daniel Moylan, Chairman of the LLDC, said: "This has been the most successful Paralympics in the history of the Games. Thousands will be inspired to get involved and we want to make sure there are opportunities for all."

After the Games, the park is set to reopen as Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park next July.

New specialist school opens

A NEW school that specialises in health and digital technologies has opened its doors to its first students. Hackney University Technology College (UTC) combines vocational learning with compulsory GCSEs in English, maths, science, IT, a modern language and a humanities subject. The curriculum was set up to offer more career-focused pathways for 14 to 19-year-olds in the borough. Students will benefit from strong links with companies, such as BT; universities; individual mentors; work on industry projects; and work experience.

Health and digital media were chosen as UTC specialisms because of the employment opportunities available locally in these fields.

Principal Annie Blackmore said: "This is such an important and exciting day. After all our preparation and planning, welcoming the first group of students to our brand new school is a significant milestone."

"Our priority is to make sure our young people get the best possible education, so our focus very quickly turned to school business and helping the students to settle in. We're all looking forward to a successful year."

The UTC opened within the Hackney Community College site in Hoxton on 6 September and its sixth-form is scheduled to open next year.

Relight the fire

The Paralympic torch lit up Hackney on route to the stadium for the opening ceremony

CROWDS lined the streets in their hundreds to welcome the Paralympic torch as it passed through Hackney on its way to the opening ceremony.

Despite delays and terrible weather, the torch arrived dragging along blue skies to help the five Hackney torchbearers – Aneurin Wood, Sharon Jones-Barnes, Kayum Choudhury, Tim Rushby-Smith and Amir Laksari – complete their section of the relay route.

The borough team was due to carry the torch in Hertfordshire, but Hackney Council helped arrange a last minute change of plan with the London Organising Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games so residents carried the flame on home turf.

Aneurin said of the honour: "I feel fantastic. It's great to be able to do this in Hackney."

Entertainment was put on for the waiting crowds at Hackney Town Hall square, including Steve Day, who calls himself 'Britain's only deaf comedian', who compered the event; a dance performance from carnival group Tropical Isles; songs from community choir,

Marva Antoine, Tropical Isles' creative producer, said: "This is a fantastic opportunity to perform to welcome the Paralympic torch to Hackney. The group has been learning sign language as part of the experience."

The torch arrived at the Town Hall Square at 7.30pm, approximately one hour behind schedule, to be greeted by Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe.

It then travelled to London Fields Lido – where the US Paralympic team had been training – to be met by Cllr Jonathan McShane; the Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Jessica Webb; former Paralympic swimmer Dervis Konuralp; young disability swimmers; and representatives from organisations which contribute to the borough's disability sports activities, including Age UK Hackney and Disability Forum.

Dervis, from London Fields, is Hackney's

Olympic and Paralympic ambassador. The 100m butterfly swimmer has 35 medals, 14 of them gold. He said: "Today is a very special moment for me. I live on the other side of the park and did my training here. To even imagine the Paralympics were coming here is something I never thought of, not in my generation.

"The Games not only inspire the next generation of Paralympians, it educates and shows what a disabled person can achieve."

Cllr McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, added: "Today is a very special day as we welcome the torch for the world's second biggest sporting event. People with disabilities want to live life like anyone else. We need to change attitudes and I hope this event presents a change in Hackney."

Changing perceptions

A SPECTACULAR Paralympic opening ceremony went off with a big bang, once again putting East London in the spotlight.

Jenny Sealey MBE, artistic director of Graeae theatre in Hoxton, and Bradley Hemmings, from the Greenwich and Docklands International Festival, devised a show featuring flying performers, the Big Bang theory, physicist Stephen Hawking, actor Sir Ian McKellan and – aptly in view of the downpour just hours before – an umbrella dance to herald the 14th Paralympics on 29 August.

The ceremony was inspired by Shakespeare's 'The Tempest' and celebrated a UK homecoming for the Games, while putting disabled artists at the heart of the performance.

The show, at the Olympic Stadium, dealt with themes of exploration, discovery and enlightenment, asking the audience to 'look at the stars and not down at your feet,' to highlight humanity's limitless possibilities.

Jenny said: "Working with such a dedicated cast of disabled and non-disabled, professional and volunteer performers has been the most wonderful experience."

Hackney schoolchildren and residents were involved in the show, including pupils from Millfields Community School, and 52-year-old Dorinda Moreira, from Dalston.

Twenty four Millfields students from year six went to 12 rehearsals and performed in a scene about the wonder of stories.

Headteacher Jane Betsworth said: "It's been a privilege being part of the Paralympics, as we are an inclusive school it has special significance for us."

Pupil Louis Stonehouse Klyne, 11, wore a suit with words from the Universal Declaration of Human Rights on it and performed a robot dance. He said: "It was amazing, really special. I had to look scared when a massive dog attacked me."

Fitness teacher Dorinda went to more than 20 rehearsals and took part in the opening umbrellas sequence with 600 other performers.

She said: "The applause and the cheers were electrifying. When the GB team came on we thought the whole place was going to come down."

"Tears came when I saw some of my disabled colleagues – it moved me. It proves disability does not stop people being wonderful athletes and performers."

Young Hackney

Four new youth centres are set to open this month

YOUTH clubs in Hackney are set to be transformed as four new, state-of-the-art centres get ready to open their doors this autumn.

The Young Hackney centres will specialise in different themes which have been chosen by young people, including IT and media, sport, enterprise and arts.

An iconic new central youth hub in Dalston will provide a base for the Hackney Youth Parliament, Youth Inspection Team, and Youth Volunteering programmes. It will also support four other centres across Hackney.

The Shoreditch centre, in Hoxton Hall, will specialise in arts; the Concorde, in Homerton, will focus on sports and healthy living; Parkside, in Woodberry Down, will specialise in enterprise; and Stoke Newington, in Milton Gardens, in IT and media.

The youth centres will also offer a huge range of services from homework clubs and cookery lessons, to music and employment support. And they will provide targeted services, aimed at young people who need extra support, or are at risk of offending.

The Young Hackney

“I can’t wait for the arrival of the new youth centres... This is going to have a massive impact on young people’s lives” centres will be open seven days a week, giving young people somewhere to spend time with their friends. They will be open to anyone aged eight to 19 living in Hackney, regardless of which neighbourhood they come from.

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children’s Services, said: “This is a really exciting time for young people in Hackney – there are more opportunities than ever to access local youth centres and all the activities and services they have to offer.

“At a time when many councils are closing youth clubs or cutting services for young people, I’m proud that we’re about to open some new and improved centres, and I hope that our young residents who

The Council secured money for the new centres through the Government's myplace scheme after a group of local young people presented their ideas for improved youth services in Hackney to a funding panel. The group wanted to get more young people off the streets and into positive activities and to change the negative perceptions some people have of teenagers.

The Council was awarded £5million, and a new Young Hackney centre in Milton Gardens, Stoke Newington, specialising in IT and media, opened in October 2010. The remaining centres are due to open between now and October.

Samuel, 19, of Hackney Youth Parliament, said: "I can't wait for the arrival of the new youth centres. I've had a sneak preview of all the great features that are going into them. This is going to have a massive impact on young people's lives – my friends are so excited."

Residents are invited to a preview of Young Hackney at a Hoxton Hall open day on 16 September. Young people who have been involved in the refurbishment will give guided tours of the centre from 11am-12.30pm.

Taster sessions in dance, art, music and drama will take place in the centre's new studios and theatre from 1-6pm. The talents of local young people will also be on show in a production from 6-9.45pm.

For the love of good food

HARDEEP Singh Kohli has packed a lot into his 43 years: he's a comedian, TV presenter, radio broadcaster and newspaper columnist. But his first love is most definitely food.

So great is his love of all things food-related that Hardeep is about to take to the road with his second culinary-themed live show, 'Indian Takeaway'.

It sees him order a local takeaway, recommended by a member of the audience, and race against the clock to cook up a feast before it arrives, sharing recipe tips and hilarious anecdotes along the way.

But his passion for food is about to make its mark on Hackney in an altogether more serious way, with plans to open an Indian restaurant near his home in Dalston.

Speaking at his local, Cafe Oto in Ashwin Street, he says: "The food in Hackney is remarkable. We're sitting here in Dalston Junction and within half a mile in each direction is probably some of the best food you'll get in London.

"You've got Shanghai in Dalston Kingsland, one of the best dim sum restaurants in town; Peppers and Spice in Balls Pond Lane, which serves excellent Caribbean food; Huong Viet on Englefield Road, which is astonishing, and Faulkner's chippie – the full complement."

Talking about his own restaurant plans, he added: "I've already got the “There's an energy around here that you just don't get anywhere else. It makes me proud to live in Hackney” menu sorted and I'm just working on the location now. It'll be all my own Indian recipes and I'm really excited about it; the people of Hackney know their food."

Hardeep hopes the restaurant will help him realise another of his ambitions: to encourage young people to take up cooking.

"I like the idea of setting up a community kitchen in Hackney," he says. "We've got one of the highest rates of obesity here. Nobody shows kids how to cook nowadays – if you teach people to cook they'll automatically eat better. I want to teach young kids and parents how to enjoy cooking."

Hardeep is already a familiar face with young people across the borough, thanks to his involvement in education and youth projects at the Hackney Empire. He's keen to dispel some of the negative stereotypes about young people in the borough.

"I have a stereotype of black youths in Hackney: mine is that they're all really polite, really well brought up and they're really honourable. I do wonder where the rest of London gets its stereotypes from – they don't help."

"There's some incredible talent in Hackney and what I love about working with the Empire is that it's unlocking that talent. The way I see it, if you're busy in a recording studio, working on a play, or practicing stand up, you're not busy doing anything else.

"A lot of kids lack confidence and focus. Give them an opportunity and you unleash that. If I hadn't had opportunities I could've ended up on the wrong side, so if I can help them, I'm going to do all I can," he adds.

Indeed, it's been a busy few months for Hardeep. As well as preparing for his tour, some new projects with Radio 4, and a new book, he compered a series of events at Hackney House, the Council's pop-up exhibition and media centre to promote the borough during the Olympic and Paralympic Games.

He said: "I opted out of the Edinburgh Festival this year to stay and work in Hackney. It was lovely to be a part of what was going on in the area during the Olympics."

"I'm so proud of East London – I'm not sure it would've been the success it's been if it was elsewhere in London. There's an energy around here that you just don't get anywhere else. It makes me proud to live in Hackney."

Vortex Outdoors

22 September, Gillett Square, N16 8AZ

VORTEX celebrates its 25th anniversary with free, live and outdoor performances from Nostalgia 77, known for heavy funk, hip-hop beats and dusty old jazz; blues and ska from The Annie Whitehead World Music Workshop; North African fusion by Seeds of Creation; while Moroccan groove adventurers Electric Jalaba will also entertain.

More announcements from the big band, contemporary, vocal, free-impov, folk and world jazz promoting venue are likely before the event.

Arguably, Vortex is one of the most recognised jazz venues in the world. Mercury nominated bands such as Polar Bear and Portico Quartet have played on its stage, as have saxophonist Evan Parker and popular pianist Jamie Cullum. Vortex Jazz Club founder David Mossman said: "Vortex has lasted so long because of the music. Jazz is a survivor; it's not everyone's cup of tea, but there will always be people creating things you don't understand. That's what pushes art forward." For more info, visit: www.vortexjazz.co.uk

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: I'd really like to know what happens to things after I put them out for recycling – especially paper, cans, plastic bottles and cardboard.

A: There are a lot of different uses for recycled materials here in the UK. Here are just a few of the things that could happen to your recycling:

Paper and cardboard – All of the paper used for newspapers is now 100 per cent recycled, including this copy of Hackney Today. Other uses for recycled paper include tissues and packaging.

Cans – Either made from aluminium or steel, these materials can be easily reused. Aluminium is generally remade into more drinks cans. Steel can be made into all sorts of things including bike frames, cars, bridges or a humble paperclip.

Plastic bottles – As one of the most versatile materials we use, recycled plastic can be found in everything from window frames to garden sheds. They can also end up as plastic bottles once more.

Aske Gardens in Shoreditch has reopened after undergoing a facelift to improve its games area and access

Aske gardens revamp

ASKE Gardens in Shoreditch has undergone a facelift, which the Council hopes will lead to more people enjoying the space.

Improvements to the tree-lined gardens include re-surfacing a multi-use games area; repainting tennis court fences; building new benches, bird boxes and bike stands; putting up new signs and adding more recycling bins.

The grass will be reseeded and new shrubs that support biodiversity will be planted, turning the area into a haven for wildlife.

Gates at the Pitfield Street entrance have also been re-opened, making the gardens more accessible.

The Council hopes the project will encourage more young people to use the gardens by ensuring it is a green space with access to sports throughout the year.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for

Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Aske Gardens have been given a new lease of life and now we hope more people will visit and enjoy this urban oasis. Hackney has more green space than any other inner London borough and the Council is committed to maintaining and improving its green spaces."

The improvements were agreed after residents and stakeholders were given an opportunity to have their say on proposals to re-invigorate the gardens.

The renovation project was funded by sportswear giant Nike through its 'FlyKnit Collective' project. The Council worked with Hackney-based architecture practice, We Made That on the plans for the gardens.

Borough's food growing programmes are to be showcased

HACKNEY is set to take part in the capital's first ever Urban Food Week, as well as the 20th annual Open House London weekend.

Taking place from 10 to 16 September, the food week is being organised to highlight the importance of buying and eating local food, urban growing schemes, and developing a food supply for bees.

As part of the week, Hackney-based social enterprise Growing Communities is hosting a free, seasonal produce tasting event at the Castle Climbing Centre, Green Lanes, from 5-8pm, on 13 September.

On 15 September, campaign group Capital Growth hosts a walking tour of green spaces in East London, including talks from growers and an urban foraging course in Stoke Newington.

As part of Open House weekend on 22 and 23 September, Growing Communities is opening its market garden and eco-classroom in Allens Gardens off Manor Road. The eco-classroom has rainwater harvesting, a composting toilet and a sedum roof to attract bees.

Its Clissold Park growing site will also be open to visitors keen to find out more about urban food growing and sample the award-winning salad produced there.

On 22 September, visitors to Stoke Newington Farmers' Market will also be able to explore a growing site in the vicarage garden behind St Paul's Church – another opportunity to see how land is being used to produce local food.

Hackney estates in energy award bid

TWO Hackney Homes initiatives have been shortlisted for a prestigious national green award.

The Shoreditch Heat Network (SHN) and Gascoyne Points Community Energy

Savings Project (CESP) are both in the running for the 2012 Energy Awards' renewable energy project of the year.

The SHN scheme replaced aging gas and oil-fired boilers with a new, more energy efficient combined heat and power

(CHP) system. The aim is for the network to supply heat to over 489 homes on Cranston, Wenlock Barn and Fairbank estates.

As part of the CESP, Gascoyne Points on Wick Road received a complete makeover, providing energy savings for residents.

The blocks have been fitted with a new roof. Stone exteriors were also given a new lease of life through over-cladding, which combined with new double glazed windows and external wall insulation will see residents' heating bills and carbon footprint drastically reduced.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Advisor for Hackney Homes, said: "The SHN and CESP projects showcase our commitment to improving heating and insulation for our residents whilst saving money on their energy bills and transforming the look of the local area."

The award winners will be announced in December.

News in brief

Learning to shop the fair way

NEWSREADER and Hackney resident George Alagiah will chair a Question Time-style debate on Fairtrade on 26 September. The theme of the evening will be 'Can your shopping basket change the world?' A panel of guests will debate and answer questions from the audience.

The event will also bring together figures from the local food movement and business to talk about the following issues:

- Is it necessary to pay more to shop ethically?
- Does supporting overseas producers come at a cost to local producers?
- Does it make a difference where and how we shop?

The Hackney Fairtrade steering group hopes to also use the event to launch its bid for re-accreditation as a Fairtrade borough, and to gain ideas about how the international movement – which ensures fair pay and conditions for farmers and workers in the developing world – can be further promoted in Hackney.

The free event, which runs from 8-10pm at Stoke Newington Town Hall, is open to all.

TODAY the name of author Grace Aguilar (1816-1847) is all but forgotten, but during the 19th century she was acclaimed on both sides of the Atlantic for her poetry, novels and works on Jewish religious and historical subjects.

Aguilar was born in June 1816 at The Paragon in Paragon Road, the eldest child and only daughter of Portuguese-Jewish parents, her father Emanuel serving as the Parnas (lay leader) of the London Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue.

Always a delicate child, at the age of three Grace suffered from an unidentified illness which left her weak and prone to infections, and as a result she was educated almost entirely at home by her parents. Grace developed a great love of reading and writing, starting a diary at the age of seven, which she kept throughout her life, and completing a now lost play, 'Gustavus Vasa', in 1828 when she was only 12.

That same year, her father contracted tuberculosis and the family moved to the South Coast in the hope that sea air would aid his recovery. Emanuel used this time to concentrate on educating his daughter in Jewish history, recounting stories of crypto-Jews who had pretended to convert to Catholicism in order to escape the horrors of the Inquisition.

Inspired by these tales, 15-year-old Grace began to write 'The Vale of Cedars, or, The Martyr', an historical romance set during the Spanish Inquisition – which would take her four years to finish.

During this time, Aguilar's mother Sarah became gravely ill, requiring a major operation, and Grace nursed her mother for several years.

In 1834, at the age of 18, Grace realised she had to change from writing as a hobby, to writing for a profession, in order to help bolster the family's now greatly reduced income. She herself became seriously ill a year later when she caught measles – then often a fatal disease – but was determined to keep writing, working on the draft of her first novel 'Home Influence'.

Like its successors 'The Mother's Recompense' and 'Woman's Friendship', this depicted an ideal Victorian wife who keeps house and husband whilst also teaching religion and morality to their children.

The family moved back to Hackney, living at 5 The Triangle, from where Grace contacted Benjamin Disraeli to ask if his father Isaac, also a Portuguese Jew and resident of Stoke Newington, could help find her a publisher. Isaac introduced her to an editor at R. Groombridge and Sons who would go on to produce many of Aguilar's British publications.

Throughout the rest of her life, Grace Aguilar produced works focusing on domestic, religious, and historical themes that gained her supporters both of Jewish and non-Jewish backgrounds in Britain and America. Her first major international success was 'The Spirit of Judaism', a collection of theological essays arguing for Jewish religious reform and the spiritual needs of women which quickly made her a household name.

It may have been income from this publication which allowed the family to move again, this time to Aguilar's sentimental fiction and poetry became massively popular, and she combined this romantic outlook with religious themes in 'The Perez Family', the story of a devout Jewish family in Liverpool who suffered hardships with honour.

The Aguilar family was also suffering, with Emanuel dying in 1845 after nearly 20 years of illness, and Grace battling a spinal problem that paralysed her muscles and lungs.

In the summer of 1847, Grace was persuaded by her brother to visit Frankfurt and consult an eminent German doctor. But she died there on 16 September and was buried in the Jewish cemetery.

Sarah Aguilar oversaw the posthumous publication of much of her daughter's work, but by the end of the century its style and sentiment was no longer in fashion and Grace Aguilar became forgotten – despite having contributed so much towards Anglo-Jewish enlightenment.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. In this issue, chef Amrit Bhachu presents this easy to make and healthy dish – perfect for the end of the summer. Visit Waterhouse on Orsman Road to try the dish and explore some of the other gems on the menu this month.

Red pepper and sweetcorn risotto with goat's cheese

Serves 2

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
20 mins

Ingredients

- 2 red peppers
- 4 shallots, diced
- 2 sticks of celery, diced
- ½ leek, diced
- 1 corn on the cob
- 200g risotto rice (Carnaroli)
- 1 glass white wine
- 1 litre veg stock
- 20g goat's cheese
- 30g butter
- Grated parmesan
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- Salt and pepper

1. Roast the red pepper so the skin comes off and dice, discarding the seeds
2. Cook corn in salted water for about 10-15 minutes. Pick out kernels from cob once cooked
3. Add shallots, celery and leeks to a pan, heated with a little olive oil and sweat until soft with no colour
4. Add risotto rice and cook until transparent
5. Add white wine to deglaze the pan until the alcohol has cooked out
6. Add veg stock in batches, continuously stirring so that the rice cools evenly
7. When the rice is nearly cooked add the red peppers and the sweetcorn and cook until the flavours are absorbed into the rice. When completed, take off the hob to rest
8. Add goat's cheese, butter and parmesan. Cover with a lid so that the rice fluffs up
9. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Method

1. Roast the red pepper so the skin comes

Car club scheme

THE Council is holding a consultation on proposals to create 48 new car club locations across the borough.

The move is part of a Council bid to ensure there is a car club bay within a three minute walk of each household in Hackney.

The Council aims to:

- cater for increasing numbers of car club members in the borough;
 - ease parking pressures within the borough.
- (Research suggests that for every car club vehicle introduced, 20 private vehicles are taken off the road, which means car club bays reduce demand for parking spaces);

- give people who cannot afford a car access to a vehicle when they need it;
- reduce reliance on private vehicles by residents and businesses;
- improve the level of social inclusion for residents who cannot afford their own car.

Residents and businesses in the immediate area of proposed bays should have received a consultation leaflet and questionnaire.

The consultation closes on 1 October, to find out more, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/carclub; or call: 020 8356 8475.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

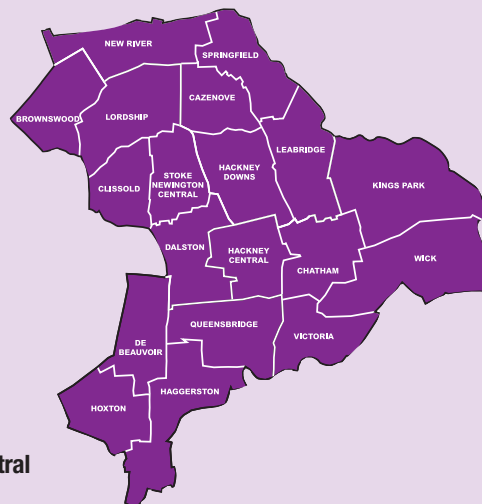

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/I-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm
